Route Summary: This is a very pleasant four mile walk, across Woodbury Common and the pebblebeds, which were created over 240 million years ago.

Description

[1] Leave the car park, passing to the right of the large Pebblebed Heath interpretation board, and turn right, then left and left again. This leads you in a big U shape around the ramparts; the final turn will take you up towards the road to join the path and then you turn right (N). Follow the wide old coach and horse track (NE), with pebbles underfoot.

[2] Enjoy the wide-open space of the common, follow the wide track (NE) for 2 miles, with gorse bushes on either side of the path. After 1 mile the path borders a military training ground on the right, (marked Danger Area on the map), look out for warning flags when it is actively being used and keep to the paths.

Landmark: See the sea to your right in the distance. After 1km look out for a white thatched farmhouse on the left.

[3] Follow path north eastwards as it goes gently downhill into a small beech copse. The track narrows as it winds down and has high banks on either side, just wide enough for a car. It leads down to a road at Hawkerland cross roads, with a bridge over a stream.

This section of the East Devon Way was once part of the old road along which the stage coach passed on its journey from Topsham to Newton Poppleford.

Opposite this barn turn right to go up the road towards a large white thatched house on the right.

Follow the track as it winds around, after about 100yds you will see wide open vistas as the wide 'coach and horses' track leads you up on to the common.

[6] Follow the cart track after 1/2 mile cross a bridleway and a footpath. You will soon see the A3052 up in front of you. Take the path on the right (E) up to the Hawkerland Hill car park (also known as Joney's Cross).

This is the end of stage 2. Across the A3052 Road is Ayelesbeare Common, an RSPB nature reserve and well worth exploring.
